public press. The press was inaccurate—the press was unreleable. It was managed and controlled by corroption. He had seen papers in New York wake up with a lie stamped on their very face. He had seen their swearing one against the other, and overy one of them perjoired by their own showing. He concluded by eloquently urring the House not to pass these bills, but to strike them out of the report.

Mr. Scholdfield replied in defence of the press, declaring he scened the legislator who would not be guided by the voice of the public press.

The Speaken took to floor, when the previous question was moved, but the floure refused to order it.

The Speaken took to floor, when the previous question was moved, but the floure refused to order it.

The Speaken then spoke in favor of the bills. He had always voted and should always vote for city railroads in New York. They were demanded by public nocessity. The rich approved them and the poor solution them. This was the true state of the case. He was from a rural district, but had for twenty years past done more business in New York than a beight of her people. He knew of the subject of which he spoke. These railroads, if built, must be done by corporation. As to who were the corporators he cared ret. One man was as good as another, so long as they would build and honestly operate the roads. He would give the franchise without cest. If half a milison of dollars was paid for the franchise it would go into the treasury and relieve the rich for a year from a trifle of taxation; but the poor would be taken out of them in locressed fare. An allosion hat teen made to the incorporated Stage Company. That company, he understood, was in favor of the proposed

OUR RELATIONS WITH ENGLAND AND NICARAGUA.

[From the Washington Union, April 1.]

An attack on the President has appeared in an evening otemporary which demants a passing notice. It is full of misrepresentations. We shall not quote its insulting and offensive language, but shall reduce in by the statement of a few plain and misspitable facts.

1. The President never did change his policy in regard to the Cayton Bulwer treaty. From the time he went to England as minister of the United States until the present moment, it has been always the same. He went to England for the purpose of convincing the British government that their construction of this treaty was unfounded. They were in possession of the whole coast of Central America, with the exception of a small portion, and they contended that this treaty authorized them to containe in possession. It was contended by the United States that this treaty obliged them to abaden all their possessions in Central America, including the Mosquito protectorate and the Bay Islands. The issue was thus fairly joined. In the President's first annual message in December, 1857, in what then appeared to be the irreconcilable difference of opinion between the two governments, he consloyed the following language: "The fact is, that when two nations like Great Britain and the United States, matually desirous as they are, and I trust ever may be, of maintaining the most friendly relations with each other, have unfortunately concluded a treaty which they understand its senses directly opposite, the wisest course is to abrogate such a treaty by mutual consent, and to commence anew." At this very time, however, he added that "whilst entertaining these neutiments, I shall nevertheless not refuse to contribute to any reasonable adjustment of the Central America note of the treaty will be substantia of left Congress this arrangement will be carried into effect.

2. As to Sir William Gore Ouseley, all that has ever been gald as to his mierference with this question is wholly unfounded, and is the offspring of morbid suspicion. During his residence in Washington he always said—and we believe truly—that he was awaiting detailed instructions upon the subject. He never held any communication, of any kind, respecting it, either with the President or the Secretary of State. All that ever transpire his relation to it was between Lord Napier, the askino wiseged Minister of Great Britain, and the government of the United States. After Sir William's departure, the substance of these instructions was communicated to the Secretary of State through Lord Napier; in fact, the government have never heard from him, either oracly or in writing, in relation to through Lord Napier; in fact, the government have never heard from him, other orarly or in writing, in relation to the matter, until the present moment.

3. In the course of the negotiation, Lord Napier did, at one time, suggest that he thought the British government might favorably receive a proposition to abrogate the Chylica and Buliwer treaty; but he gave notice that, if this were done, the British government would insist upon retaining the Bay Islands, the most important part of their possessions in that region. This proposition was, of course, rejected. Our poncy from the beginning was to exclude Great British would have retained possession of the British would have retained possession of by far the most commanding position on the cast of Central America. We should then have had no other alternative but to abanden the Moures doctrine, or attempt to drive ber out by force of arms. Seriely no American statesman could ever have acceded to such a proposition.

The truth is, that when the time shall arrive for com municating to the public the correspondence in relation to the Clayton and Bolwer treaty, they will be astonished, even in this age of misrepresentation, at the falsohoods which have been circulated in regard to the whole sub-form.

even in this age of misrepresentation, at the faisehoods which have been circulated in regard to the whole subject.

A CASE OF INFATUATION.

[From the Washington States, the filbosters' organ.]

* * The President, toatead of persisting in his particite policy, on a sudden, and without apparent excess, withdrew his demand for the abrogation of the Clayton Balwer treaty, and initiated negonations for the anticition of the Islamian controversy on the basis of a perpetual observance of that abominable engagement. Nay, more, by the concession of the official organ in an article now before us, he admitted the English Eavoy into the secret of his dinformacy, and made sir William Gore Ouseley the representative of his policy. At the instance of that willy and unscrupious savenurer, the President repudiated the regular British Munister who was ready, as we are prepared to prove, to accept a renunciation of the Chayton-Bulwer compact, and with Sir Gore Ouseley concocted a plan of softlement which that imputent personage proposed, for the avowed purpose of perpetuating a treaty repugnant to all the instincts and interests of the American people. Nor was that all.

Such was the infatuation of Mr. Buchacan, that he even deputed Ouseley to execute the agreement; and while the British envoy was assistiously operating to scenre Eagland's footbold on the Islamius, the American representative was instructed to second his efforts, and the American squadron ordered to prevent any interruption to their progress by the inopperatum interruption of a fitboster enterprise. Why did Mr. Buchanan consent to play the part of accessory, to the disgrace and disparagement of his even country? It was bod, we do him the justice to admit, with a deciberate intent to betray American interests.

Mr. Buchanna is a victure of mispanced condidence. He is the dupe of Ouseley's article dipiomary. He supposed himself to be persuaded that England would negonate to the equity, the Chaptonagy is trumphant, but his pedges—what, of them, and confidently anti nvention.

Those are facts of which we defy contradiction.

PREAM OF THE BROADWAY BEAU.

BY JULIA CARY RUBENBARDT.

Horrible dreams I have often had;

Terrible, mystical, dread and sad;

Visions of frenzy, and visions of pain;

But never a vision that troubled my brain

Like the one that 'll rell you—Lord only knows How or why it attacked me—but here it goes:

I dreamed that I stood in a crowded street,

Made musical now by the tramp of fret:

And he ore me, lifting their gittering sides,
Like martel cilift o'er these hums udes.

Three snow white palaces, massy and fair,
Towered giant like up in the summer air! The from were gilded, the walls were lined With mirrors and soulpture well designed. Carved Graces lifted each silver land. And luxury there had placed her samp, While the tables groaned under endless place Of men and boy's clothing in all the styles!

If the people say that have had the misfortune to be deluded by those billard table manufacturors who shoved off their goods under a sort of implied great reputation from the use of a certain matchmaking tilliard player's name. Now, reputation as a player is a thing that may be or not be, according to fancy or circumstances, buck, &c, but a good, sound, mathematically accurate billiard table is a marier of undensible, unchangeable and unquestionable fact. Such tables could only be the vestil of long practical experience gradually acquired by the manufacturer, who have winessed all the nocumulated improvements, such as L. DEOKER, 20 ann street,
New York.
